PURPOSE

This addendum accompanies the academic documents prepared for the School of Record named above. It explains the legal standing of a home school in Texas, so that an admissions office, recruiter or employer can read the enclosed documents in their proper context.

LEGAL AUTHORITY IN TEXAS

Texas Education Code § 51.9241

Section 51.9241(b) requires Texas public institutions of higher education to treat undergraduate applicants presenting evidence of successful nontraditional secondary education according to the same general standards, including specific standardized testing score requirements, as public high school graduates. It does not guarantee admission or credential acceptance.

Texas Education Agency v. Leeper, 893 S.W.2d 432 (Tex. 1994)

The Texas Supreme Court construed the compulsory-attendance private-school exemption to include bona fide home education using a curriculum covering reading, spelling, grammar, mathematics and good citizenship. This holding is not a graduation-credit certification or an admissions guarantee.

The Administrator, not Gradescript or Texas, determines homeschool graduation. TEA does not approve or accredit homeschools and does not award homeschool diplomas. Grades and completion are administrator-reported, not independently investigated. Any uncertain legal application requires qualified Texas legal review; no attorney certification is claimed.
